Q1

Reference to context.

Reference:- These lines have been taken from the poem "Ozymandias" by Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Context:- Ozymandias is an ironical poem. This poem teaches its reader that man's feelings of superiority is only an illusion and deception. One must forget that how great one is in life, death is merciless and brings all luxuries of life to an end.

Explanation:- In these lines the poet admires the sculptor for making such an expensive sculpture. The sculpture made a very life like sculpture of the king and captured the expression very accurately. The poet says that the sculptor tried to keep the king and what he stood for alive. Nothing in life is immortal, ^{either} whether in real life or in art. These lines tell us that pride hath a fall, great one of great come to an end one day. The broken sculpture of Ozymandias and the pedestal state the fact that however great one may be in life ~~one~~ has come to an end and one has to face destruction.

MORAL:- "A Friend in need is a friend indeed"

Friendship is the hardest thing in the world to explain. But if you have not learned the meaning of friendship, you really have not learned anything. Through thick and thin ^{up} and down, your true friends are always around.

There lived two close friends in a village and were very fond of travelling. One day they went to a forest to see the natural beauty and walking along the path of forest. They were so spell bound by the beauty of the forest that even did not notice ^{that} they had entered into the deep forest.

Suddenly they noticed that they had lost their way. They knew it very well that the forest contain wild animals. So, they promised to one another that they would never leave each other in the time of need or danger.

One of them know how to climb on a tree but the other didn't know. Both started walking through the jungle and searching the way to get out. Suddenly (a bear) they saw a bear coming toward them and both got frightened.

One friend said, "Dear friend, I will climb up a tree. As you don't know how to climb, you better run away". After hearing it he become very disappointed. But he knew the bear does not eat a dead body. So, finding no other way, he fell flat on ground like a dead man.

When he guessed that the bear was just beside him. he stopped breathing. The bear smelt the body and thought him to be a dead body. So, it didn't injure him and went away.

The friend on the tree saw everything. When the bear went away, he got down from the tree. He went to his friend and asked him eagerly "Dear friend, What did the bear whisper into your ear?" In reply the friend said.

"Bear told me that a friend in need is a friend indeed."

At this, the false friend felt embarrassed and apologized for his mistake.

Moral: A friend in need is a friend indeed.
