Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
 Which yet survive, stamp'd on these lifeless thin
 The hand that mock'd them in the heart that
 And on the pedestal these words appear:
 "My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:

These lines have been taken from the poem 'Ozymandias' by Percy Bysshe

Shelley

Content :-

Ozymandias is an ironical poem which teaches its reader that a man's feelings of superiority is only an illusion and deception. One must never forget that however great one is in life, death is merciless and brings all luxuries of life to an end.

Explanation

In these lines the poet admires the sculptor for making such an expressive sculpture. The sculptor made a very life like sculpture of the king and has captured the expressions very accurately. The poet has conveyed in these lines that the sculptor tried to keep the king and what he stands for alive. But nothing in life is immortal, whether in real life or in art. These lines tell us that pride hath a fall, however great one may be ultimately has to end one day. The broken sculpture of Ozymandias and the pedestal state the fact that however great one may be in life one has to face destruction.

Question 2

A friend in need is a friend indeed

Friendship is the hardest thing in the world to explain. But if you have not learned the meaning of friendship, you really have not learned anything. Through thick and thin, up and down, your true and real friends are always with you.

There lived two close friends in a village and were fond of travelling. One day they went to a forest to see the natural beauty and walking along with the path of the forest. They were so spell bound by the excitement of the forest that they even did not notice that they had entered into the deep forest.

Suddenly, they noticed that had lost their way. They knew it very well that the forest was abode of various wild animals. So, they promised to one another that they would never leave each other in times of danger.

one friend knew how to climb on a tree but the other did not. Both started walking through the jungle and searching the way to get out. All of sudden, they saw a bear coming towards them. and both got frightened.

One friend said, "Dear friend, I will climb up a tree. As you don't know how to climb you better run away." The other friend became very disappointed hearing this. But he knew that a bear doesn't eat a dead body. So finding no other way, he capitalized the idea.

When he guessed that the bear was beside him. He stopped breathing. The bear smelt the body of the lying friend and thought him to be a dead ~~to~~ body. So, it did not injure him and went away gently.

The friend on tree saw everything. When the bear went away he got down from the tree. He went to his friend and asked him eagerly. Dear friend, what did the bear whisper into your ear? In reply friend said

Bear told me that a friend in need is a friend indeed

At this the false friend felt embarrassed and apologized for his mistake.
